Pool standoff continues

Conflicts over overflow system

BY TERI WEST

The system that kicks in when a pool gets overfilled with rain is at the center of a dispute between the Town of North Hempstead and the Clinton G. Martin pool contractor.

The Town of North Hempstead provided full plans for a new overflow system in February and did not plan to pay the contractor, the now bankrupt Gramercy Group, for what Gramercy Group said would be "several hundred thousand dollars" worth of work.

But the saga of the overflow system dates to December 2017, when Gramercy Group was in the midst of the pool repairs.

Recent letter exchanges between the Town of North Hempstead and Gramercy Group, conversations with the contractor's lawyer and contract documents chronicle the dispute.

When Gramercy Group was retained as the pool repairs contractor, the pool had an existing gravity overflow system, Gramercy Group's attorney Mi-

Remembering Florence Lisanti

Former trustee, historian dies at 91, helped start New Hyde Park street fair

BY TOM MCCARTHY

Florence Lisanti, a former village trustee, deputy mayor and historian in New Hyde Park who helped start the village's annual street fair, died on June 26. She was 91.

The village Board of Trustees meeting last Thursday started with a moment of silence for Lisanti. "Florence was a very special person here in the village," Mayor Lawrence Montreuil said. "Florence Lisanti loved New Hyde Park. She spent many, many countless hours in service to the Village of New Hyde Park."

"She could really just connect easily with people," Lisanti's daughter

Geri Lisanti-Levy said. "She had a warmth and an acceptance about her immediately." Lisanti-Levy said that one might feel judged or labeled by a stranger, but with her mother, there was an innocence and comfort knowing her. However, Lisanti-Levy said, you wouldn't want to cross her.

During her time in New Hyde Park Lisanti was a member of the PTA at Hillside Grade School and New Hyde Park Memorial High School and served on the Nassau County PTA Council. After her husband of 42 years, Gerald, died in the early 1990's she eventually got into local politics.

In 1993 she was elected to the village Board of Trustees and during her second term served as deputy mayor. For her final role in local politics, she served as village historian where she preserved the history of New Hyde Park through historical
